

John S Dalrymple Biography

John Dalrymple is President of Hamill Manufacturing Company, which is located in Penn Township, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania. Hamill is a precision machining and fabricating company that serves the Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program and other defense-related companies, the power generation industry, the aerospace industry, and other industries requiring high degrees of precision and quality.

John joined Hamill, a family owned business, in 1979 as a co-op student while still in high school and achieved journeyman machinist status in 1984. John progressed through the positions of CNC Programmer (2 years), Manufacturing Supervisor (8 years), Manufacturing Manager (3 years) and Director of Customer Development (7 years) before being named President in 2006.

John has served on the Education Team, Business Development Team, Technology Team and Membership Value Team for the National Tooling & Machining Association. He currently holds the position of Trustee for the Pittsburgh Chapter and serves on the board of the New Century Careers training center in Pittsburgh.

John is a graduate of Norwin High School in North Huntingdon, PA and Central Westmoreland Career and Technology Center in New Stanton, PA. John attended Westmoreland Community College in Youngwood, PA where he studied Engineering Technologies and is a 12-year member of Vistage.